

ICE MOON
POEMS BY
RICHARD DENNER

ICE MOON

D PRESS 2000 SEBASTOPOL COVER ART BY THE AUTHOR COPYART BY CLAUDE SMITH

PERFECT

arguing into the early hours about the global economy and the greenhouse effect we solve the world's problems for another night while the stars shine through the colander in the sky after you leave I continue to drink until I'm topped off and tipping over miserable fuck that I am I crawl across a gravel pit and down a culvert where I find a pinhole of firelight and I laugh and laugh and laugh happy to find light in the middle of the tunnel

MARILYN MANSON ON THE RAG

for Tamara

Billy Blake wanders in the chartered streets crying weep weep weep Sylvia Plath lies in a basement her cunt full of worms Williams Carlos Williams crawls to his Asphodel

Dylan slashes his eye Villon thrashes on the scaffold and The Old Gray Poet mad blind gay SEES
all the stars and all the grains of sand all the bacteria in the shit pile are children born trembling

FOR JENNIFER

Your smile is like a Monet sunrise.
Right from the start we're old friends, although only once in three lifetimes could I find you.

SEEING ANGELS WITH THE INNER EYE

the river runs both ways innocent pristine untroubled in a clean environment

I'm always making the same mistake
O Tantrik Yogins & Christian Saints looking closer I see sludge at my door and the road detour through acid rain as the bills of regret mount higher
O Tantrik Yogins & Christian Saints
the river hugs the bank like a friend I read love poems on the leaves blessed by the air's deep prayer as I enter the center of Spring
I'm always making the same mistake
O Tantrik Yogins & Christian Saints
it's hard to breath when you are nothing and the stones simmer on the lake and night feels like a rotten tooth and to move on you have to roll snake eyes a million times in a row
I'm always making the same mistake
O Tantrik Yogins & Christian Saints
I lay down in sweet pastures I take refuge under the dress of a flowergirl

IN KETCHIKAN

walking with Frank Boardman up South Tongass from the New York Hotel toward The Beanry Frank listens to my recitation of Lu Garcia's poem and says it heralds the death of poetry

Biff!

Bam!

Pow!

Holy Cow!

Holy Cow!

Now we know

*Batman is God
is* the Devil knows who he is.

don't go on like that, he pleads and falls into a funk

THIS SCRIPT HAS LEGS

shooting video in Echo Canyon picking up voices of Mexican children bouncing off the walls while I dance freeform in the piñon pines spooking a murder of crows cut to the painted landscape near Ghost Ranch I'm wearing black a man with a briefcase walking through the desert and I work out a bit where my clothes are a shadowy specter in desert heat floating on a mirage lake and I literally jump out of my suit drop my briefcase and run across this water toward the highway as a car passes in the distance dissolve driving home the camera accidentally left on and as the car cruises along the camera sways catching us at odd angles sometimes out the window sometimes part of our torsos Jillian's legs her hands rolling a cigarette the wheel smoke and mirrors hands driving speaking natural and uncontrived about the relationship of freedom to responsibility and the need to awaken the sacred in our present commercial progressively degraded mode of being arriving home to shoot in the sunflower room sunflower wallpaper hotpads clock calendar cups curtains Jillian in a sunflower apron cooking plastic sunflowers in a kettle serving up sunflower soup in sunflower bowls on a sunflowered tablecloth without even the slightest idea of our destiny

HIGH PRESSURE CENTER

from fair to foul wind snow moon sun a balloon some alone

at her weeds the raven went bent with a drill around three trees went turn down the dream tear down the drug blow down the bank

soon a sign rain hail blow

in the spun bud I mark clean the naked zero that registers life

AT THE HELM: A RAP BY LUIS GARCIA

Snyder was telling very directly and essentially his view, his perception of what his work was about and what the world was about at that point (in the early `60s), and the way I got it was that he thought there was a real potential for the world to change, and the reason why that struck me as really interesting is because, for one reason, it's because I didn't feel that way. I may have wanted it to change in that way, but I really didn't believe it could, and I still don't, but I think that in some ways I wanted it to be that way so bad that I kind of believed that.

But I don't believe that. I believe that individuals can change themselves, if they do, for whatever reasons, if something happens, some kind of catastrophe, something demands that they somehow change, and they usually have to work years and years and years and years to do that, and then they do; they're transformed by that work into somebody who's generally very alienated; and they're out there with all kinds of thousands of millions of people who find no need at all to change. And that's the way it is; and that's the way the world goes; and then the next transformation is being able to survive as an alien in the world.

So, that's kind of where I feel I'm at. I mean I see where a lot of intelligent people have gotten involved, but there's nothing that they receive that they call nourishment, whether it's success or money or whatever, from the world that would force them to change. They never encounter anything, usually, until it's far too late in their lives to change in any way that would transform the world, and so it doesn't happen.

So, Snyder was talking about it in this book Mountains and Rivers Without End, which he started forty years ago, and this new section came out, and I went to his reading at Neuman Hall, beautiful setting, and this one section he read, that he read at the very end of his reading, really hit home, that the world as a whole had a potential to change. Absolutely beautiful. Strong.

I mean, when I was around Berkeley I knew a lot of people involved in the Free Speech Movement and all that stuff, you know, Kate Coleman and Jonathan Cott and all those people, Joe La Penta, who were really involved, but I was always kind of an outsider, partly because I didn't go to Cal; I went to Junior College when I went to school; and I was always fouled up on drugs, and I didn't real believe things could change; not that I didn't want them to; I did; but I didn't think that you could change anything about greed and people and who they can't help being, and in that sense I wasn't on board, and they didn't really want me on board, but they let me just sort of hang out, and I was just bearing witness, just like I'm still doing now.

You write a poem. You're feeling really strongly, OK, you're shouting, they're shouting, "Take off your clothes!" but these people aren't going to take off their clothes; they're not ever going to get naked, you know; they're never going to come clean unless something happens to them as an individual; nothing in their whole way of life is going to be an incentive to make them ethical; they'll just go on being pathological liars and crooks because they have to be, because otherwise they would just be slobbs like me and a lot of other people in terms of the kind of money they will have the potential to make. It doesn't pay them to think about change, basically. There's nothing in it for them.

So, unless the world completely crashes, which it nearly has anyway, being so polluted and fouled up as far as I can see... everybody's just in denial about it...I mean there are organizations that work to change the world, and all of this has to go on; it has a purpose unless we just want to throw up our hands.

OK, I've come to this place where I've done a certain amount of that work, and frankly I'm pretty exhausted, and I'm just resting up for the next round on a very personal level, because it's fine to work for change, to try and change evil, or whatever it is, and that's fine as long as you don't let it kill you. I'm just saying it's hard to change things, and unless you have the skills, it's scary. I'm trying to write the story by looking at the stars and figuring out my bearings by the day to day living.

AT EVERY LEVEL OF MONTEZUMA'S CONSCIOUSNESS

Spirit O Spool
did you punch him for his licoriceship? did her blondness run out in cold thick drops?
did I fork a virgin zero from the globe?
foul the cherub cheek winds? clog my veins with abuse of 4/4 time?

Behold the new born terror!
Behold all things new!

.

Pawing through the hospital dumpster I find an aluminum Xmas tree decorated with guaze and syringes

Insanity and murder, devastation and cruelty fatal epidemics and contagion O Furies, I look for you bringing my Great Plan

LOVE'S GARDEN

I see Eden in fire.
I see Eden in water and air.

In more than these Elements interrupted—alone and still—I see her.

AT THE GAME RESERVE

a drove of binocular persons observe elk eating hay one man's belly fills his whole car someone says
"a big sucker"
but he's talking about an elk flesh elk and belly a balsam moon at apogee when I'm near you my sap rises and I feel like locking horns

JOY IN ALL THE LITTLE THINGS

Cheri Quigley in pink a pink pillbox hat, coat and dress drops her purse in Howard's Cafe and it opens and her birth control pills roll out and I pick them up and ask her name and I think she says Cherry Quickly and I tell her I would like to, but the elfish brightness in her eyes undoes me and she knows it and laughs bright laughter

if she has her way I will dance to mad atonal music made from hitting garbage cans and the ringing of cow bells while she claps and laughs

VISIONARY DESIGNS

Lu and I drink tea at Nefeli's on Euclid then hike around the Berkeley hills looking at houses

this is the Lawson house built by Bernard Maybeck in 1908 after the great earthquake making a connection between past and present the house resembles a Mediterranean villa and links the earthquake to the volcanic destruction of ancient Pompeii

each linked to each I'm planning a house to look like a jet crash to connect the present with the way the planet will look over the next thousand years

BOX OF NERVES

walking on the sea shore sea surf sand dunes sand in my shoes salt sun sea sand in my hair rock water mist air waves breaking sea foam sea weed sea wreck serenity dearth decay division disaster when I come back to town I feel like a robot standing in a haze tape hiss follows me I'm sure a dæmon is eating my wiring the chair says, "gow" the light bulb says, "pfup" the bed says, "let the snake coil and the tiger bite"

OF SUNS AND WORLDS

For Jessica

pink cotton candy in the pine trees my assemblages looking FINE
hanging on my bedroom wall in morning light after worrying about their (aughh!) MEANING last night

my dried grass imbedded in handmade paper with dried grass laid on a photograph of dried grass under an ink drawing on a transparency and watercolored engraving of dried grass entitled even this alchemy converting each moment into the next forges locks on your heart had seemed TRITE
and a trifle overdone drawing with my finger in the air does any of this exist?

